

Dual Citizenship

What is Republic Act No. 9225?

Republic Act No. 9225, otherwise known as the Citizenship Retention and Reacquisition Act of 2003, declares that natural-born citizens of the Philippines who acquired foreign citizenship through naturalization shall be deemed not to have lost their Philippine citizenship.

Who are qualified?

Only natural-born citizens of the Philippines who have become citizens of another country by reason of naturalization may retain or re-acquire their Philippine citizenship under this Act.

How do I prove that I am a natural-born Filipino?

Natural-born Filipino citizens are those who are citizens of the Philippines from birth without having to perform any act to acquire or perfect their Philippine citizenship. The following are considered as natural-born Filipino citizens:

- A person born on or after 17 January 1973, and one or both parents were Filipino citizens on the birth date;
- A person born on or after 14 May 1935 and the father was a Filipino citizen, or if the father was not, the mother was a Filipino citizen and the person elected Philippine citizenship (upon reaching the age of majority) pursuant to the provisions of the 1935 Constitution;
- A person born prior to 14 May 1935 and at least one parent was an inhabitant and resident of the Philippines.

Will my application for dual citizenship under R.A. 9225 affect my U.S. citizenship?

Prospective applicants for dual citizenship under R.A. 9225 are advised to visit and read the contents of the website of the U.S. Department of State which contains information about current U.S. government policy on dual nationality, or to seek legal advice from a U.S. immigration lawyer.
